RESERVES CHASE A MAD DOG THAT HAD BITTEN SIX PERSONS.

Two Women and a Policeman Among the Victims-A Fox-Terrier and a Black-and-Tan Attacked by the Animal Are Shot A Magistrate Uses His Shotgun. A big dog, part bull and part mastiff, ran muck at Bath Beach yesterday morning, and, ment that, white no plan has been formed as ere it was killed, bit six persons. The dog was first seen about 7:30 o'clock near the Dyker Heights bridge. It was frothing at the mouth, and a laborer, who was passing, hurled a stone at it and sent it scampering and yelping along Bath avenue. At Fifteenth avenue the animal sprang upon Mrs. Rose Sawyer of Bay Eleventh street and, after biting her severely on the wrist, ran along to Bay Sixteenth street. where it met Miss Batcher, a teacher in Public School No. 1. She was waiting for a trolley car to the city. The dog attacked her and bit her on the arm and waist. Several men who were near by came to her assistance and gave chase to the animal. The cry of "mad dog" was raised by the men as they ran, and before they had reached Bay Twentieth street nearly a hundred people had joined in the chase. The animal afterward ran up Bay Twentieth street to Benson avenue and through Nineteenth avenue, where it bit Ray Mulvey, a son of Detective Mulvey, in the right leg. Henry Moore of Benson avenue and Patrick Walsh of Bay Twenty-second street encountered the dog a few minutes after it had attacked Mulvey and both were badly bitten on the hands and legs. The next victim was Policeman Francis T. Farrell. He had just left the police station in Nineteenth avenue with official papers to headquarters and before he could draw his revolver the anjmal had fastened its teeth in his hand.

The police on reserve in the station were called out and added to the excitement The dog ran into the yard of John C. Gerkins in De Bruyn's lane.

JURY TRIAL FOR SAPHO. Justice Fursman Says It's a Case for Twelve

Men (if the Grand Jury Indicts.) As was foreshadowed in yesterday's Sun Justice Fursman of the Supreme Court has made an order transferring from the Special Sessions to the General Sessions for a jury trial the case of Olga Nethersole, Marcus Mayer, Hamilton Revelle and Theodore Moss, charged with maintaining a public nuisance by producing the play "Sapho." ealls for the exercise of judicial discretion where it is made to appear, and only where it is made to appear, that the case presents such exceptional features as to render a jury trial proper. In my judgment the present case presents such exceptional features. The papers disclose that the play has been presented in various cities of the country without objection or substantial the country without objection or substantial criticism on the ground of morality, and for a period in the city of New York without police interference. It does not seem possible that there can be any substantial contraintion as to the facts. The play itself and the manner of its production by the dofendants and the several actors taking part in it, must necessarily be always substantially the same, although it is possible that different informences may be drawn by different minds from witnessing it. All men do not regard the same play, or book, or the actual visible conduct of others alike. Some minds are so sensitive as to be shocked by the undraped statue of the Venus of Milo, and regard the story of the merciful journey of the Lady Godiva as a shamefully indecent tale, while others find little to condemn in the lewd conversation and lascivious conduct of men and women whose lives are given over to debauchery and vice. This play is not to be condemned because it may shock the sensitiveness of the former nor approved because it may gratify the latter.

"The question to be tried is, "is the play of such a character and so produced as to outrage that sense of public decency which is common among educated, modest, right-minded fairthinking men and women?" Upon the determination of this question the rights of the defendants must decend. The case is one that has rarely arisen. Large property interests are necessarily involved. The right of the public to witness the play as a means of rational enoryment is involved. In short, so many things in which both the public and the accused are interested are necessarily included, and to be affected by the final decision of this question, that it presents teatures entirely above and beyond, and of much greater importance than those usually involved in the trials of misdementors. It seems to me, therefore, proper and teasonable, that this charge should be precriticism on the ground of morality, and fo

The Aeolian will enable you to play any piece of music ever composed without waiting to study or practice. If you want a program of operatic music, you have simply to make your selection and insert that particular roll of music in the instrument and you can render it as you wish to hear it rendered.

If your mood or the occasion calls for dancing, you can play waltzes, lancers, two-steps, and polkas with perfect time and rhythm. The Aco'ian is really a solo orchestra. The rich field of orchestral music is open to it. As its technical capacity is unlimited, it enables the player to execute every note of the score—an achievement which it is next to impossible for two hands to accomplish. While the Aeolian has technical powers, immeasurably beyond those of the most skilful technician, the performer is complete master of the expression.

This is the secret of the Aeolian's fascination. It is responsive to the player's every feeling.

He renders the music just as he thinks it should be played. He controls the slightest change of tone and tempo. He can play just what he wants to hear, and he can play it just when he wants to hear it. He is independent of every one.
